

Museum Essentials: Working with Collections

Martin Bellamy transcript

My name is Martin Bellamy. I'm the Research and Curatorial Manager for Glasgow Museums. My aspiration for collections is that we know that museum collections have the power to change lives and have the power to help people to live longer so let's use the full power of collections. Let's help people to live longer better lives. We have the power, it's remiss of us not to use that power, we have an obligation to society, particularly with local authority public museums, we have that obligation to society, so we have to use it. So let's use museum objects to help people live longer and better lives.
